Once per visitor, after two seconds

Four lines. Ask opens the form; Not now keeps it away for 30 days. The pill at the bottom right stays.

The site is a screenshot of invitaheadspa.com from 28 October 2026. The widget on it is the real script, mounted inside the phone. The text message and the answer page are drawn. White and grey, one typeface. Every word waits for your OK.

Three things

A photo, a number, a tick. A few words are optional. Send is grey until all three are there.

Nothing else on the site

The request is now in the trichologist's chat in the app. Done takes the customer back to the page; the prototype jumps to later that day.

From Invita's number

One line and a link. The audio is never sent as a file: the link always opens the latest answer.

The same shape as the app's chat

What you asked, as your bubble. Then Ariel: the routine, her full answer with her voice, the treatment as a card. The one thing to do sits where the message box would be: Book, or Skip.

One question at a time, in the thread

Each answer lands as your bubble, as in the app's walk: ZIP or location, the nearest spa with Ariel's days, the day. Nothing else on screen.

The last bubble

Day, time, spa, street, directions. Done. In the app this last step is Invita's own booking page, opened with the request's code.
